THE MAYORALTY.

To the Editor of the Times

Sir,—Will you allow me sufficient of your valuable space to state that your correspondent John Mair made two misstatements over his signature in THE TIMES of last week. I deny that I told him that F. O. Davis was not going to run again.
My remark to him was that Mr. Davis had informed me during the day that he was undecided in the matter. Only this and nothing more. I did not refuse to scratch John Mair's name off the list, I simply declined to have any further dealings with such a fickle minded elector.
Permit me to say I am thankful that the liberal patronage of a grateful public which continues to flow to the Advocate leaves me no time to waste—were I so inclined—on those who do not possess sand enough to criticize the actions of another over their own signatures, except to say that the Advocate did not support Mr.
Davis against Mr. McPhail three months ago or at any other time, and I challenge any person to quote me one word from the Advocate which could possibly be construed to mean support of T. O. Davis for the position of mayor of this town.

YOUNG LIBERALS MEET.

The regular fortnightly meeting of this association was held in Foresters Hall on the 31st ult. The programme consisted of a general discussion on Women's Rights Mr. H. J. Montgomery taking the leading part on behalf of the fair sex. The right of the ladies were also championed by Mr.
Stull, Mr. Deacon, Mr. Gough and Mr.
McPhail. Mr. Gillmor, for the sake of argument, expressed a different view and contended that if women were granted the franchise they would perhaps lose that modesty of demeanor which is now their chief charm to man. This loss, if sustained, would, in Mr. Gillmore's opinion, be the greatest calamity that could befall the race. This view was also expressed by Mr.
Geo. Walker in a very neat speech. An address by Mr. Stull on the present political situation was a marked feature of the evening's entertainment. After Mr.
Stull's address the meeting adjourned.

PRINCE ALBERT, JAN. 8, 1895.

Down in the Eastern Provinces and throughout the Eastern States the close of the year was marked by fierce wind and snow storms, with a very cold temperature. The city of Montreal experienced a severe blizzard on the 27th and 28th ult., from the effects of which the streets were filled with flying snow and huge drifts piled up wherever an obstruction broke the force of the wind. Business was practically suspended all over the city, and traffic by wheeled vehicles was totally suspended. This kind of weather mostly prevailed all over eastern Canada. And yet, if one were to get into conversation with most of these people down there they would wonder how it was possible that any one could live in a cold country like these Northwest Territories. But we who have the good fortune to reside in this country have much to be thankful for if we only would bethink ourselves a little. Business may be a little dull here and money scarce, yet, thank goodness, we are not reduced to any great straits. We have not heard of any starvation here yet. There is plenty to eat and we have a glorious climate that beats the world. We are beyond the reach of storms. Since last October we do not believe the wind has risen higher than ten miles an hour. We have beautiful clear weather with just enough snow to make first-rate sleighing. Our roads are as smooth and hard as a table, and the merry jingle of bells is heard continuously in our streets. Cold! Bless you no, it is only exhilarating and just enough to make the young feel happy and the old to feel themselves young again. Again we have abundance of good cheap fuel which can be procured without much trouble. And when summer comes what a delightful country, beautiful scenery, a splendid soil, nature's garden for cereals and root crops. What can wish for better? Let the denizens of the east, if they are dissatisfied with their climate just come out here and enjoy with us the pleasure of inhaling the gorgeous health inspiring air of our Great Northwest.

The next session of the Imperial Parliament is to be open sometime in the beginning of February. It is generally conceded that the government will have a hard road to travel at this time, if not an actual defeat. Home Rule is a sort of nightmare to the party which to all appearances may prove its overthrow. At the last general election Home Rule was sprung up in the people before they had time to think over the matter, and if it were not for the House of Lords, Gladstone would have carried his Gladstone Bill into law, which would have been a find by him, an endless source of trouble to the United Kingdom. The people of England and Scotland are now, however, fully informed upon what the consequence would be by granting self-government to the malcontents of Ireland; and in consequence will not be caught napping. Home Rule, as shadowed forth by Mr. Gladstone's Bill, meant nothing more nor less than the disintegration of the Empire; and this we are sure the people of England and Scotland will not permit. Another circumstance which prevents the people of Great Britain to be very enthusiastic on Home Rule is the continual squabbles and internal quarrels of the Home Rule party among themselves give the people of England an inkling of what would be the state of affairs if they were left to form a government among themselves. From present appearances it would seem that Home Rule is as dead as a door nail for some time to come.

The unseating of Dr. Smythe in Kingston and of Mr. Savage in West Algoma, and the retirement of Mr. S. S. P. from the representative of Haldimand, will make the outlook for Sir Oliver Mowat's Government considerably brighter. In the general elections the Conservative majority in Kingston was 1,100 in West Algoma it was 8, while in Haldimand it was 15. With this inclination so often shown by the constituencies to side with the Government in bye-elections there is not much doubt that two, if not all these, will return Liberals to the Legislature and the present Mowat majority of one will become, by comparison at least, quite a respectable quantity.

The atrocious cruelties perpetrated upon the Chinese, by the victorious Japs after the capture of Port Arthur, have filled the civilized world with horror, and people are beginning to think that it is high time to put a stop to this savage warfare. It is clear that the Japs are not now fighting for a right, but for conquest. The conduct of her troops at Port Arthur would indicate that whatever she may wish to appear outwardly, she is, nothing more yet than a band of savages. We think that if both the Chinese and the Japanese nations were wiped out and partitioned off among the civilized nations of Europe, the world would be none the worse for it; and this, we believe, will be done at no very distant period.

Mr. McBride, the president of the American Federation of Labor, advocates the taking over by the Government of the railways and subsequent ly of such other means of production as the people may decide. Mr. McBride advocates this, not in the interest of the railways or of the country generally, but for the sake of those who work on the railroads, and who are a very small portion of the community. It will not be in Mr. McBride's day that he will see his scheme executed. The people who would have to pay will have a say in the matter as well as those who expect to be paid.

Brockville is likely to see its coming municipal elections run on political lines. A Liberal offer of a compromise has been rejected by the Conservatives and as the Liberals, who have controlled the town for many years past, have allowed some $80,000 of arrears in taxes to accumulate, the Conservatives appear to have justification. The Liberals have not made a success of their opportunities.

Newfoundland business men are said to be talking of their willingness to revert to the condition of a Crown colony. Responsible government is not a boon unless responsible men have the conducting of it, and apparently some people think this has not been the case in the ancient colony.

North Carolina reports eight lynchings to three legal hangings during the last three years. For a community with a record like this police, magistrates and jails are an unjustifiable extravagance.

Irish papers are discussing the profitability of some Canadian potatoes imported for seed purposes and planted in the cold soil. Canadian potatoes apparently do as well in Ireland as the Irishmen do in Canada.

As will be seen in another column the nomination for mayor and councillors for this town came off on Monday last. The time is short and both sides will now be busy in order to secure as many votes as they can, but we trust Mayor Davis will not fail to get a fresh lease of office. It is how ever hard to determine when we find such curiously constructed individuals in our midst as will sign the requisition for both parties and then glory in their dishonesty. As for the councillors, with so many to choose from, all good men and true, we shall think there would be no difficulty in securing a good council for 1895. Specially we would recommend Mr. A. S. Stewart with some of the councillors in the field would we think make a safe council. Mr. Stewart is acknowledged to be the best authority on Finance in the town, therefore his election would be deemed a great gain to the citizens of Prince Albert.

Cataract, Heart Failure, Paralysis of the Throat

"I Thank God and Hood's Sarsaparilla for Perfect Health."

"Gentlemen: For the benefit of suffering humanity I wish to state a few facts: For several years I have suffered from catarrh and heart failure, getting so bad I could not work and

Could Scarcely Walk

I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. My throat seemed closed and I could not swallow. The doctors said it was caused by heart failure, and gave me medicine which I took according to directions, but it did not seem to do me any good. My wife urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, telling me of Mr. Joseph C. Smith, who had been

At Death's Door

but was entirely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. After talking with Mr. Smith, I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken two bottles I felt very much better. I have continued taking it, and am now feeling excellent. I thank God, and

Hood's Sarsaparilla

and my wife for my restoration to perfect health." HARVEY HEED, Laceyville, O.

HOW IS THIS?

Something new even in these days of mammoth premium offers is the latest issue of the Stafford's Magazine, a New York monthly of home and general reading.

The proposition is to send the Magazine one year for one dollar, the regular subscription price, and in addition to send each subscriber fifty-two complete novels during the twelve months; one each week.

Think of it! You receive a new and complete novel, by mail, post paid, every week for fifty-two weeks and in addition you get the magazine once a month for twelve months, all for one dollar. It is an offer which the publishers can only afford to make in the confident expectation of getting a hundred thousand new subscribers. Among the authors of the coming series are: Wilkie Collins, Walter Besant, Mrs. Oliphant, Mary Geel Hay, Florence Marryat, Anthony Trollope, A. Conan Doyle, Miss Bradton, Captain Marryat, Miss Trevelyan and Jules Verne. If you wish to take advantage of this unusual opportunity send one dollar for Stafford's Magazine one year, your first copy of the magazine and your first number of the fifty-two novels a week each, which you are to receive during the year will be sent you by return mail. Remit by P.O. Order, registered letter or express.

LIFE IN RUPERT'S LAND

IN THE OLDEN TIMES.

By JAMES STEWART.

TWENTY-FIRST PART.

Time rolled on and the month of June brought to Norway House great number of boats from different parts of the country, namely from Lac la Pile, Fort Ellice, Saskatchewan District, Cumberland and various other parts bringing the officers of each fort to the yearly council held at Norway House on the arrival of the Governor, Sir George Simpson. Somewhere I think about the middle of June, Sir George Simpson arrived with his fleet of four canoes from Montreal, manned by Iroquois from the Province of Quebec, together with about five or six young Frenchmen as servants. Of course the young Scotch lads were anxious to see the man who was to knock us all into a cocked hat on his arrival. Consequently when the news came that the Governor was coming down the river, everyone hastened down to the river to see him land. As soon as the canoes touched the shore the crews jumped out and commenced unloading their cargoes while the governor was employed in shaking hands with every one of us great and small. Among the company who arrived in the canoes I noticed a stout raw boned Frenchman, making himself very conspicuous by his swaggering airs, and stood sometimes looking at the crowd of us on the bank with a sort of disdainful snarl. I was mentally wondering in my mind who this pompous individual might be when one of the Frenchmen of the fort whispered to me that this was none other than the redoubtable Michael Nadeau. I did not feel very much startled over the news, but concluded to wait for developments. They came sooner than I expected. On the morrow Hounston and myself were coming from the fur store, where we were engaged packing furs, to our breakfast, when we were met by this newly imported champion.

We politely wished him good morning to which he replied with a sort of half grunt. He immediately turned to my friend and asked him if his name was Hounston. My friend eagerly replied that it was.

"Well, I understand," said he, "that you have been looking for me."

"I was not looking for you very much in particular," replied Willie, "yet nevertheless I am always glad to meet with a good man."

"Take care," said Nadeau, "you had better keep yourself quiet, you are no match for me."

"Well, well," said Willie, "that may be but we will see how much blood that will do."

By this time all hands understood that there was something afoot and in a little time the belligerents were surrounded by a crowd of Scotch and French from the house.

Nadeau made a blind rush at Hounston, but somehow his left arm happened to run against Hounston's fist and the shock, I suppose, caused him to fall on his back. This trifling accident seemed to rattle his temper considerably, and getting up in a rage, made a blind rush to catch Hounston by the throat, but a well directed blow into the broad back by Hounston's fist laid him on the ground limp as a rag doll of old clothes. This was the finishing touch, he lay senseless for a time, when Hounston turned calmly around to the French and said:

"Boys, take up your man, I think he is rather sick."

The French looked crestfallen, they saw that their hopes of supremacy were blasted forever. The great Michael Nadeau had met his match and got the worst of it.

On the day following that event, Hounston and I were proceeding to our work in the fur store, as usual, and on our way passing the master's house, we observed Chief Factor L—, a big burly Englishman taking a quiet walk in front of the building. On perceiving us he called out in a stentorian voice:

"Hi, boys come here."

"On our approach he thus addressed Hounston, 'Well, Willie, you thrashed that Frenchman yesterday.'"

"O yes," replied Willie, "that was not very hard to do."

"Tell me about it," quoth Mr. L—.

Hounston proceeded to give a circumstantial account of the whole affair, and ended up by saying, "He tried to grip me by the throat, when I up with my fist and gave him one like that," at the same time acting the action to the word, he planted a shoddy header into the pit of Mr. L—'s stomach, which sent him sprawling over a sidewalk. This was a vulgar demonstration with a vengeance, with which Mr. L— was more than satisfied. As a rule indicates supreme pleasure when people are more than satisfied with anything, but on this instance the reverse was the case.

Mr. L— gathered himself to his feet, searing black and dire, vengeance, and uttering all sorts of punishment, rushed off to lay a formal complaint before Sir George Simpson.

Sir George, when he had heard the whole story, lay back in his chair and laughed heartily. He congratulated Mr. L— on the truthful, as well as striking manner, in which the victory over the Frenchman had been communicated to him, but that really he himself did not see the way clear to punish a servant for so foolishly acting forth the truth. Sir George said, however, that he would see Hounston about the matter.

Accordingly in the evening when return to my work, we noticed Sir George walking in front of the officers' quarters, seemingly in a brown study. He was, however, and called us to him. He was a very affable man, and generally spoke in a very low voice.

"Well, Hounston," said he, "I believe you thrashed that Frenchman yesterday."

"Yes, sir," said Willie, "I gave him a good lesson."

"Come and tell me all about it," said Sir George in a half whisper.

Willie related the circumstance in much the same manner as he had done to Mr. L—, but when he came to clinch his narrative with an offhandier, Sir George was off like a rocket. On getting sufficient space between himself and Hounston, he turned around and smiled, and asked, "Willie if he took him to be such a d—d fool as Mr. L—?"

"It is all right, however," said he, "the story is very well told, and I am sure a glass of brandy might wind up the matter now."

He invited us into his office and we drank his health in a very becoming manner. There is no doubt but that had Sir George stood his ground when Hounston was describing how he disposed of the Frenchman, he would have received the same discipline that was meted out to Mr. L—. Yet Sir George Simpson was respected by all the servants of the company. In fact he was the best ideal of a good master, kind and considerate to all under his charge, more especially to the laboring class of the community. If any dispute would arise between a master and one of his servants, Sir George would invariably take the part of the servant. He was fond of a rich joke, and enjoyed it none the less when perpetrated on himself. In those early days some of the masters or chief traders got the name of being rather inclined to tyrannize over their servants, but in time cases out of the fault lay with the class of servants with which they had to deal.

The masters who bore this character were mostly of the old school descendants of the Montreal Northwest Fur Company who in the early days had only French Canadians and Iroquois to deal with, as servants, were under the impression that all servants were servants and would submit to any indignity because their French servants would do so. Sometimes a master would try to administer a little chastisement to a servant, but it was often not very safe to try this upon the Scotch lads as they had an inveterate habit of returning the same with interest. But that rarely caused any permanent ill feeling between the parties.

The only instance of a game of fisticuffs between master and man that came under my own personal observation was in this wise:

A brigade of boats while on the way from Lac la Pile, had landed one morning for breakfast, and mostly all hands were on shore busily employed in cooking. A young Ojibwa, one of the hands on the master's boat, was still on board together with the master's cook, a dapper little Frenchman. Somehow the two quarrelled over something, when the Ojibwa grabbed the cook by the nape of the neck and the seat of his breeches and threw him over the stern into the water. The cook scrambled to the shore, nothing the worse saving for a good ducking, but when the Ojibwa jumped on shore he was confronted by his master, who proceeded to correct him for trying to drown the cook. A free fight ensued, in which the master being a fat, heavy man, came off second best.

He, however, took his defeat in good humor and straightway treated the cook to a stiff glass of brandy, which in those days was a panacea for all sores, there being no temperance lectures in the rank of the company. The master and the Ojibwa were fast friends after that little episode.

THE CANADIAN MAGAZINE.

The December number of the Canadian Magazine is beautifully and copiously illustrated by a considerable number of Canadian artists. In literary matter and variety of interest it also meets most satisfactorily the demands of its readers, and is decidedly one of the most entertaining numbers of the month. "John Brown in Canada," by J. C. Hamilton, is the result of a careful research into John Brown's Canadian career, a career marked by the Chatham convention, which may be said to have been an important step to the affair at Harper's Ferry, and the precipitation of the American war. The article is illustrated. Other illustrated articles are "Sport in Tremblant Land," by R. T. Mulling; the "Rhodes and Isles," a charming description of the fairland of the St. Lawrence, beautifully illustrated by the author, Frederick W. Edwards and Toronto Art Students League; by R. Holmes, which gives a vivid glimpse, illustrated by over forty drawings, of the inside and outside life of the League. Geo. Stewart, D. C. L., of Quebec, contributes a most entertaining sketch of Henry David Thoreau, the eccentric hermit of New England. Among other contributions are "Hudson Bay," by George H. Bradbury; "How I Went Duck Hunting," by C. Gordon Rogers; and "Shanghai," a yarn of the Dog Watch, by Edgar Bevis. The Magazine is published by the Ontario Publishing Co., Ltd., Toronto. $2.50 per annum.

A BIG DOLLARS WORTH.

The Winnipeg Daily Tribune, which is acknowledged to have—even by rival publishers—the largest circulation of any paper published in Canada west of Lake Superior, is now offering great inducements to intending subscribers. It can be obtained from now to January 1st, 1896, for $1—a very slight advance on the cost of the white paper used in its publication. At its regular price of $1 a year the Weekly Tribune is certainly extra value, and with the balance of this year free the offer becomes an extraordinary one. The fact that the Weekly Tribune reaches more homes than any paper published, is strong evidence that it is recognized as the greatest family newspaper. It publishes Dr. Talbot's sermon each week, and gives more Manitoba and Northwest news than all the other Winnipeg papers put together. This is especially interesting to the settler, as almost every district is represented. It can be had from now to the end of the year by sending $1 to the Tribune Publishing Co., Winnipeg.
